Mr. Boynton resumed the stand this morning. He said he obtained a loan of $17.000 from Credit Clerk Jordan, of Claffin & Co., on Dec. 18, 1880, to pay creditors who were at his store clamoring for their pay.

On that day his place was seized under foreclosure. He thought he owed at that time $125,000.

Lawyer Blumenstiel cross-examined Mr. Boynton, and asked: "You didn't pay off any of these alleged pressing creditors with that money you borrowed?"

"I didn't see that I could. I thought my first duty was to pay back to my friends the money I had borrowed of them."
